

Suspicious timing:

The message below never arrived, throughout the year 2025, until way late in the last month, December. And even then, not one minute before Complainant had worked on and prepared an electronic document showcasing Molina's refusal to send Molina personnel out, to visit Complainant, as requested back in the beginning of the year.

That's Guilty Knowledge. Someone(s) within Molina are hacking, and/or in communication with hackers.

That suspiciously timed message follows.

Think any of that pabulum in this suspiciously timed message would work? When the, "click here to schedule online" option for the promised Wellness Visit was clicked upon, it went to a webpage demanding the state in which the promised exam would take place. "Warmly" promised, that is, to take place. By that un-named, furtive, "Molina Care Connections Team." I dare you to pin down any names, on that, "team."

Once selected, it then went to a webpage demanding the member's zip code. Once that info had been entered, it then went to a webpage demanding that - - - one must - - - Call. It thereby defeated the entire point, of scheduling online, and proved that it had lied, in putting that promise in writing.

Webpage message:

"Select a time for your Care Connections In Person Visit (Medicare) appointment.

No available times are found. ... Call us at ..."

Go ahead: I dare you. Try independently to refute that there were, "no available times." Independently: Not merely parroting a pile of pabulum. You won't be able to. That rigidly locked construct, in which one may neither prove nor refute a fact issue, proves a design in place, to evade apprehension and arrest. A design by members of the un-named, "warm," so-called, "Care Connections Team."
